A Northwest Indiana organization focused on bolstering ethical behavior by local government employees is pleased with the number of primary election candidates who signed its ethics pledge.

The Shared Ethics Advisory Commission (SEAC) said 71% of the local candidates on the ballot Tuesday in Lake, Porter and LaPorte counties signed the pledge, compared to just 36% of candidates during the 2023 municipal elections.

The pledge asks candidates for public office to commit to providing ethics training to all employees in their locality, to favor a comprehensive local government ethics policy with vigorous enforcement, and to support whistleblower protections when local government employees file ethics complaints.

Support for the pledge was strongest in Porter County where 84% of primary election candidates signed it, followed by 73% of LaPorte County candidates and 50% of Lake County candidates.

"We are happy to see this improvement in candidates formally committing to ethics training for municipal employees," said Courtney Smith, SEAC president.

A list of the candidates who signed the ethics pledge in each county is available online at sharedethics.com or by visiting nwi.com.

The winners in Tuesday's primary election, along with any candidate who didn't participate the first time around, will have another opportunity to sign the ethics pledge prior to the Nov. 5 general election.

"SEAC has been asking candidates to sign the ethics pledge for the last 10 years and we will continue to do so for the foreseeable future. This improvement is encouraging, and we hope to reach our goal of 100% signing this simple, straightforward ethics pledge very soon," said Julie McElmurry, SEAC communications chairwoman.
